SAAM: Navy Sets Zero Tolerance for Sexual Assault

By MCC (SW) MARIA YAGER
NAVY PERSONNEL COMMAND PUBLIC AFFAIRS

There is no place for sexual assault in our Navy and efforts are underway to eradicate it from our ranks, said the director of Navy’s 2012 Sexual Assault Awareness Month (SAAM) initiative April 4.

“We can get this right in our service. We can set the example of what is really acceptable behavior; what is a good professional command climate, how we set the right environment for the right behavior to occur and we can really get to a zero incidence,” said Vice Adm. Scott Van Buskirk, chief of naval personnel and SAAM director.

Approximately 600 sexual assaults were reported in the Navy last year according to Van Buskirk, “But no incident of sexual assault is acceptable in our Navy.”

Department of Defense (DoD) defines sexual assault as intentional sexual contact characterized by use of force, threats, intimidation, or abuse of authority or when the victim does not or cannot consent. Sexual assault includes rape, forcible sodomy (oral or anal sex), and other unwanted sexual contact that is aggravated, abusive, or wrongful (including unwanted and inappropriate sexual contact), or attempts to commit these acts.

According to Van Buskirk, about half of the sexual assaults reported last year were alcohol related and Navy is introducing new training to better educate Sailors, Marines and their families to affect behavior and raise awareness.

“We have this opportunity here to leverage sexual assault awareness month to really hit home about how important it is for us to become more aware and more educated about sexual assault in our Navy and Marine Corps and really as a nation,” said Van Buskirk.

“We’re going to take the time in April to stand down, to stop all work so we can have a good opportunity to make ourselves more aware and educated about this,” said Van Buskirk. “It is a very important issue.”

The Navy will focus on four themes during SAAM: Hurts One, Affects All, Prevention is Everyone’s Duty, and We Will Not Tolerate Sexual Assault. According to Van Buskirk, training will include a segment on bystander intervention, a DoD strategy to engage all hands in preventing sexual assault.

Under the strategy, active bystanders take the initiative to help someone who may be targeted for a sexual assault in ways that are intended to avoid verbal or physical conflict.

Active bystanders take the initiative to help friends, who are not thinking clearly or whose judgment may be clouded from the effects of alcohol or other substances, from becoming victims or offenders of crime.

“Intervention does not mean that you directly intervene to stop a crime in progress, rather, these steps are early intervention before the crime begins to occur,” said Van Buskirk.

Scripts and videos for each week’s theme, engagement products, posters and other tools, are available on Navy Personnel Command’s Sexual Assault and Prevention website, <http://www.sapr.navy.mil>.

Van Buskirk said his goal is to establish a baseline of education, training and awareness for the entire Navy that is sustainable year after year until we can eradicate this problem from our ranks.

“We’ll leverage this month as a prelude to continuing our robust program which we already have established in our Navy,” said Van Buskirk. “Talking about it, being aware about it isn’t enough. We have to stop it. We have to be willing to intervene. We have to be willing to speak up. We have to be willing to act. That is what my expectations are of each and every one of you.”

Sexual Assault Prevention and Response is an important element of the readiness area of the 21st Century Sailor and Marine initiative which consolidates a set of objectives and policies, new and existing, to maximize Sailor and Marine personal readiness, build resiliency and hone the most combat-effective force in the history of the Navy and Marine Corps. The Department of the Navy is working to aggressively to prevent sexual assaults, to support sexual assault victims, and to hold offenders accountable.

CNP Holds All-Hands Call at NSA

By MC3 ANDREA PEREZ
NPC PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Chief of Naval Personnel (CNP) Vice Adm. Scott R. Van Buskirk met with Sailors and civilians from the mid-south at an all hands call Mar. 30.

Van Buskirk spoke about the 21st Century Sailor and Marine initiative, Sexual Assault Awareness Month, physical fitness and force management. In his opening remarks, he assured Sailors that they have earned the support of the fleet and the nation through the work they do.

“Our Sailors around the fleet directly benefit from the programs and policies that are developed right here in Millington, Tenn. - and you are all are part of that,” said Van Buskirk.

Van Buskirk took questions and addressed concerns from Sailors regarding end-strength, Perform to Serve, the Enlisted Retention Board, retirement and benefits, and 21st Century Sailor and Marine.

“21st Century Sailor and Marine is a really great unity of effort for the Navy and Marine Corps and how we look at, across the board, the resiliency of our force and tying in all of our initiatives that go towards this,” said Van Buskirk.

The 21st Century Sailor and Marine initiative represents five key focus areas; continuum of service, inclusion, physical fitness, readiness and safety, which Van Buskirk said are central to the mid-south Navy’s mission.

“It’s about all the programs and policies that are developed right here in Millington, Tenn.,” said Van Buskirk. “The programs and initiatives under 21st Century Sailor are ones that will help you and your family members remain ready to take on the many challenges of being a Sailor, and a Navy family.”

In addition to conducting an all-hands call, Van Buskirk also took time to participate in a pinning ceremony for Commander, Navy Personnel Command (NPC) Rear Admiral Cynthia Covell.

Van Buskirk assumed duties as the Navy’s 56th CNP on Oct. 11, 2011. Serving concurrently as the deputy CNO for manpower, personnel, training and education (MPTE), he is responsible for the planning and programming of all MPTE resources for the Navy. His responsibilities include overseeing NPC, Navy Recruiting Command and Naval Education and Training Command.

“Nothing is better than being able to work on programs that impact and make a difference to our Sailors,” said Van Buskirk. “I encourage you to take these messages here, get smart about the 21st century Sailor and Marine, get smart about some of the policies that are just generated right here in front of us - because it’s really important, important stuff.”

NSA Mid-South has talent results

By MC1 (AW) LATONYA HOWARD
NPC PUBLIC AFFAIRS

The curtains have closed and the judges have ruled that Naval Support Activity Mid-South has talent.

The Navy Personnel Command (NPC) Morale Welfare and Recreation (MWR) sponsored talent show, held at Pat Thompson Conference Center, April 6, received excellent reviews.

“NSA has talent, yes they do,” said Chief Yeoman (SCW/AW) Mark Friend, NPC MWR president. “It was a privilege to help put on a show that showcased some of the wonderful talent we have on board

NSA Mid-South.”

The event grossed more than $2100 in support of the 2012 NPC Olympics. Sailors, civilians and dependants hit the stage to display their skills.

“We had eight awesome acts, from singers, dancers, and musicians,” said Friend. “The first place winner was our closing act performing ‘At Last’ by Etta James. She brought down the house.”

Yeoman 1st Class (SW/AW) Everine Johnson took first place and received a $150 gift card prize.

Chief Yeoman Stace Pierce (SW/AW) took second place and received a $100 gift card prize. Nathan Holmes, the son of MSgt Jesse Holmes, took third place and received a $50 gift card prize.

Contestants wait for results during the Navy Personnel Command (NPC) Morale Welfare and Recreation (MWR) sponsored talent show, held at Pat Thompson Conference Center. The event grossed more than $2100 in support of the 2012 NPC Olympics.

Who are you living for?

Chaplain's Corner

By NSA Mid-South Chaplin
Cmdr. Rob Callison

Take a look at Philippians 1:21, "for me to live is Christ and to die is gain". We all live for something. We live (and long) to be loved by someone. We live for professional success and recognition from within (or outside of) our organizations. We live for comfort and security. We live (and long) to be heard. We live for the thing that, if it were taken away, would crush our spirits and leave us destitute. What do you live for today? Paul lived for Christ and if that appears to be fanatical to you then it is because you live for something else and it is not Christ. What will that something else do for you when the day comes that you have nothing else? Paul also used the metaphor of being clothed with Christ. To be clothed with Christ is to wear the Christ fashion as the pattern of your life - to be always seen in Christ just as you are always seen in uniform at work. Your uniform identifies you and, to some extent, you accept and embrace that identity. I know that some of you wear your heritage or genetics as your identity. Others of you wear your religious affiliation with pride. Paul did not. For Paul to live was Christ. In a real sense, to live is Christ means that you renounce yourself - your identity your wants, your desires, your dreams, your ambitions, your perceived obedience to the Lord - and subordinate them all to Christ. Are you wearing Christ today? To live is Christ means that you know the Lord's acceptance of you is only found in the work of Christ. It means that you know you are UTTERLY incapable of trying to please the Lord through your efforts. You know it is not Christ plus your perceived obedience; therefore you submit to Christ and cling to Christ alone as your life. To live is Christ means that total fulfillment in (the whole of) life is in knowing Christ, delighting in Christ, serving Christ, communing with Christ, glorifying Christ. To live is Christ means that you are caught up with an intoxication in fellowship and service to Christ. It means that your joy in life is wrapped up in the presence, enjoyment, and service to Christ that seeks His glory in all things you think, do, and say. It means that Christ is the total package of your life. Christ alone gives meaning and satisfaction to your life. It means that everything else in your life is subordinate and related to your prime delight in, and satisfaction in, and love for Christ. To live is Christ means that Christ is not just an example among many of how to live. To live is Christ means that Christ is your all-in-all; there is nothing else. When you are drawing your last breath, if you have lived in, through, and for Christ then to die is gain. That is why "for me to live is Christ and die is gain" was Paul's motto. What is yours?

Naval Support Activity Mid-South, Millington

So, who taught you to drive?

By Derek Nelson
Naval Safety Center

Last time, I talked about limitations. I had a bunch of my very own to confront when my wife and I moved to the Navy's capitol. I'd been used to driving around in a rural county where you could get away with a lot (such as treating lonely stop-lights as yield signs). There weren't that many cops patrolling the boondocks. I'd gotten into some bad habits behind the wheel, but the root of the problem was that I'd learned to drive from my father. He was a smart, accomplished man, a good provider who lived an adventurous life. I owe him a lot. But behind the wheel, he could be crap, with the emotional resilience of a six-year-old. Like way too many people, he thought he drove fine when he'd had a few drinks, even when his passengers had white knuckles and were fervently praying. He was my driving instructor. What did I know when I was 16? Other than the fact that I wanted to get my license, get permission to use the car, get a few bucks in my pocket, get my curfew relaxed and get my girlfriend in the passenger seat, all as fast as humanly possible? I passed the driving test on the first try and figured I was good to go. One positive thing was that, thanks to minimal horsepower, the car my older brother and I shared didn't exactly lend itself to lead-footing. Fast forward nine years. No wrecks, no DUIs (not for lack of trying). I got a couple minor tickets when we first came to Norfolk, one for rolling through a red light and one for an illegal left turn (boy, was that cop in a bad mood). Then I wrecked our old car, thanks to not expecting a car to be passing a bus that had pulled over and that I tried to cross in front of. The next major development in my continuing driver education was when my wife got her driver's license. She signed up with a professional instructor, started taking lessons, and in short order, all my myriad bad habits behind the wheel began to appear in high relief. Being in a hurry. Following too close. Losing my temper. Waiting too long to get into a turn lane. Multitasking. My wife and I had a few "discussions" (OK, arguments) about the rules of driving. It wasn't fair, and I didn't have a chance. Heck, she knew why some of those lines on the street were yellow and some were white, and why some were solid and some were broken. Apparently, I had a lot to learn, and I'd been driving more than a decade. At least I wasn't alone. You can't drive for 15 minutes anywhere in America without seeing someone doing something risky (if not illegal). At the Naval Safety Center, that fact bottom-lines as traffic deaths. From FY02 through FY11, for the Navy, that added up to 535 Sailors who were, one day earlier, busily going about their lives, and then, as we tritely say, became statistics after wrecking their car, truck or motorcycle. There were 197 on-duty fatalities during that span, which is why we say that you're safer at work. One analysis of human factors involved in more than 300 traffic wrecks showed that 60% involved "skill-based errors." In other words, six times out of ten, the driver wrecked because he or she lacked the driving skills to keep four wheels on the pavement and keep from smashing into other cars. It wasn't "bad luck" or "the other guy's fault." No, it was usually some combination of distraction, fatigue, maybe a few beers or a couple of shots and speed (everybody speeds most of the time, anyway). Some of it starts with thinking that knowing how to start a car, push on the brake and accelerator, and temporarily learning enough to pass the driver's test is all there is to it. A great starting point would be to stop being part of the problem. Check out some of the traffic-safety presentations on the Safety Center website. Download the manual from your state's DMV website. Consider the former truck driver who was a member of the trucking industry's Three Million Mile Club, recognition of driving that far without an accident. It took him 40 years, during which time he logged the equivalent of 125 trips around the world, without an accident or a ticket. His wife said that he referred to other drivers as "idiots." I see proof every day. That's where pessimism pays off.

NSA Mid-South Tornado Drill focuses on Readiness

By MC2 (SW) RONDA SPAULDING
THE BLUEJACKET

If you live in the south you are most likely familiar with the season, tornado season. During the spring the Mid-South region is under increased alert for severe weather and tornados. On May 9 NSA Mid-South will conduct a mock tornado drill to evaluate and practice for an actual event.

As a military installation we are in the business of being prepared with drills to raise public awareness. Practicing emergency response is how we find glitches, see what works, what fails and find ways to minimize the chaos. It brings together base staff and regional partners to solidify what their actual roles are with preparation, reaction and recovery of the base and its residence.

"This drill is the perfect opportunity for the community to see our emergency personnel in action and evaluate our own disaster readiness", said NSA Mid-South Commanding Officer Capt. Stephen Fimple. "This is an excellent resource to test our capabilities and those of other responders before a real disaster occurs."

If we cannot predict severe weather, then the next best course of action is to prepare for it. Whether you are active duty, civilian or part of the surrounding community everyone has a role to play. Being prepared is your duty in some form or another whether it's as a parent, sibling, child or spouse there is someone that will need your help.

Potential threats vary by area but much of how you prepare for an emergency is the same. Be informed, have a plan and make a kit. Be informed about hazards in your area; be alert for base mass communication systems such as warning sirens, Giant Voice messages and AtHOC messages that pop up on your computer screen. When conditions are favorable for severe weather to develop watch the news and weather reports. Weather Service personnel use information from weather radar, spotters, and other sources to issue severe thunderstorm and tornado WARNINGS for areas where severe weather is imminent.

Having a plan is essential to survival; discuss evacuation routes and potential shelters.

Are you a Storm Spotter?

Mr. Jim Branda, with the National Weather Service will be hosting a free Storm Spotter class open to everyone on April 25 at 9 a.m. in the Pat Thompson Center's Magnolia Room. Class will last approximately two hours and will cover severe weather threats such as thunder storms, tornados and flash flooding.

Everyone will receive a certificate at the end and it's a terrific opportunity for anyone who is interested in learning more about being safe during severe weather.

This exercise should help people become familiar with shelters within their building and can check with their building manager for information on shelter in place locations in their work environment.

"The main objective for the base, actually the main

"opportunity" that exists within this tornado exercise, is for everyone to review and practice their shelter in place plan, and if they don't have one, then to create it, publicize it within their command, and practice it the day of the drill," said Ken Andrews, Installation Training Officer. "It should take no more than 15 minutes; 15 minutes that could help you save your life."

Not all shelters are created equal. Storm cellars and basements provide the best shelter. If getting underground is not an option then no matter what kind of structure you're in get to the lowest level, inner most room away from windows and doors and away from flying debris. Gymnasiums, theaters or any open spaces are the least favorable because of potential pressure build up.

Once you are in place you never know how long you may have to wait for rescue, at home its best to make sure you have three days of food, water and medication on hand.

These drills are not conducted to inconvenience you or your routine, they are to test procedures, limit confusion and save lives.

Since its launch in 2007, the Veterans Crisis Line has answered more than 400,000 calls and made more than 14,000 life-saving rescues. In 2009, the Veterans Crisis Line added an anonymous online chat service, which has helped more than 4,000 people.

SAAM: For James E. Williams SAPR Rep, it's Personal

BY MC3 DANIEL J. MESHE
ENTERPRISE CARRIER STRIKE
GROUP PUBLIC AFFAIRS

The command Sexual Assault Prevention and Response (SAPR) representative aboard the Arleigh Burke-class guided-missile destroyer USS James E. Williams (DDG 95) witnessed first-hand how a sexual assault impacted the life of one young female Sailor.

Information Systems Technician Chief Megan C. Gibbs spoke about how the young Sailor had been frightened of the repercussions should anyone find out, and she was embarrassed that it had happened. She didn't know who to turn to, and worst of all, she didn't think anyone would believe her.

She became withdrawn, and afterwards, she chose to leave the U.S. Navy upon completion of her first tour.

For Gibbs, spreading awareness of sexual assault is a cause she strives to take to the deckplates to prevent stories like this from ever happening again.

Along with Gibbs, service members from all branches of the United States military have banded together in solidarity to recognize Sexual Assault Awareness Month (SAAM).

The goal of SAAM is to reduce sexual assault through direct and sustained engagement of all hands.

From placing teal ribbons and posters around the ship, to conducting training and counseling, Sailors aboard the James E. Williams are actively participating in the effort to raise awareness of the impact sexual assault has on both the individual and the crew.

"As SAPR representatives, we provide immediate assistance to sexually-assaulted victims," said Gibbs. "We provide them with resources, medical care, and proper reporting."

While response is necessary in dealing with the fallout of sexual assault, SAPR representatives incorporate a variety of training aids to educate the crew on what sexual assault is, how it can thwart the mission, and what resources are available to victims.

"We use Powerpoint presentations, scenario cards, and training videos," said Gibbs. "These are just a few of the methods we have to reach the crew."

Gibbs hopes these training aids also help reduce and prevent sexual assault from occurring.

"Some people have it stuck in their mind that because she didn't say 'no,' or the person was 'asking for it,' that the perpetrator feels it's acceptable to engage in sexual acts with the victim," said Hospital Corpsman 2nd Class Ashley R. Thomson, a SAPR victim advocate aboard James E. Williams. "But it really comes down to 'no' means 'no', because without consent it's sexual assault."

Thomson stresses that the individual assaulted is not the only one affected.

"It puts a strain on both the victim and the command," said Thomson. "The command might lose the Sailors involved, or it can cause people to become mentally unfit to do their job."

The effects of sexual assault can erode operational readiness and create a tense and high-pressure workplace, which can lead to a breakdown in performance.

"It makes people worry that it can happen to them; their shipmates, their friends, and they can be constantly uneasy about what happened to them, or they can breakdown and shut everything out," said Thomson.

By making the program noticeable around the command through flyers, sexual assault ribbons, and by providing resources for the crew, SAPR advocates work to prevent sexual assault and ensure victims receive the proper attention, said Thomson.

"Servicemembers are taught to take care of each other," said Gibbs. "We are here to accomplish our mission, and sexual assault terribly hinders that."

Sexual Assault Prevention is an important element of the readiness area of the 21st century Navy and Marine initiative which consolidates a set of objectives and policies, new and existing, to maximize Sailor and Marine personal readiness, build resiliency and hone the most combat-effective force in the history of the department. Scripts and videos for each week's theme have been provided to commanding officers to help facilitate discussion throughout their commands. These engagement products, in addition to talking points, posters and other tools, are posted to Navy Personnel Command's Sexual Assault and Prevention website, <http://www.sapr.navy.mil>.

Help raise awareness by joining the conversation on social media using #SAAM.

NSA MID-SOUTH 2012 EARTH DAY ACTIVITIES

This year NSA Mid-South will host its Earth Day activities on Thursday, 19 April. Although the nationally-recognized Earth Day 2012 falls on Sunday, 22 April, it is hoped that more people aboard the installation will be able to participate in Earth Day activities on a normal work day. However, you will likely see other related events at different locations during the following week as well.

Although we encourage every organization on base to get out and "spruce up" your own buildings and work spaces, Earth Day activities will primarily consist of two events: (1) an Earth Day tent display in front of the Navy Exchange building and (2) an enhancement of the Nature Trail behind Wood Hall, Building 769.

DISPLAY TENT: Several local environmentally-friendly organizations will set up display tables inside the MWR tent from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. MWR plans to showcase its youth-oriented gardening initiatives as well as their outdoor recreation equipment. Mr. Chris Cooper, Ph.D., from the University of Tennessee Extension Service will answer questions to help improve your gardening experience. The NEX Garden Center will host an inter-active "potting display" for young children in front of the NEX Garden Center. Other displays will include energy conservation, Van Pool initiatives that could pay up to $125/month, upcoming running events, relaxing "green" trips by ITT, and other environmental topics of interest. Each attended display will feature brochures, posters, mementos.

NATURE TRAIL: Under the direction of the Seabees, there will be a general "clean-up" of the Nature Trail located at the southwest corner of the parking lot behind Building 769 (Wood Hall - Promotion Board Building). Since the weather may be a little warmer, we plan to begin at 9 a.m. and finish around 11:30 a.m. Tasks will include clearing the debris from the asphalt trail (primarily sweeping off sweetgum balls); removal of weeds and undergrowth from around trail markers, wooden seats, and interpretive tree signs; cleaning of the bluebird house; and possibly spreading a few wildflower seeds. We request that all volunteers plan to bring their own gloves, dust mask, water, and other equipment to support the effort. If mosquitoes seem to enjoy you as a "fast food restaurant", you may want to bring a little repellent and wear long sleeves.

If you have questions or would like to volunteer, please contact Rob Williamson, the base Natural Resources Manager and Earth Day Coordinator, at 874-5399. We look forward to seeing you on the 19th!

Navy Officer Earns Master's Degree for the Cost of Textbooks

By SUSAN HENSON
CENTER FOR PERSONAL AND PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

It may sound too good to be true that a Navy officer who received her master's degree April 9 paid only for textbooks - yet it is true, and other Sailors have the same opportunity.
Lt. Olivia Degenkolb successfully completed a Master of Arts degree in administrative leadership through the University of Oklahoma (OU) using the Navy College Program for Afloat College Education (NCPACE). This Navy Voluntary Education (VOLED) program offers Sailors assigned to sea-duty commands the opportunity to take courses while on deployment through accredited colleges and universities with no tuition cost to students. Students' only financial obligation is to pay for course textbooks.
The Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD), headquartered in Virginia Beach, Va., administers the Navy's VOLED program, which is part of the Department of Defense's voluntary education program. Navy VOLED offers a wide range of education services and programs to assist all Sailors - officers and enlisted - in attaining their higher education goals. NCPACE and many other VOLED programs provide the Navy's uniformed workforce numerous opportunities designed to fit into their high-operational-tempo lifestyles.

While many Sailors take advantage of NCPACE, Degenkolb's use of the program to complete all her master's degree requirements is no small feat, according to Dr. Mary Redd-Clary, CPPD's director of VOLED. "Very few individuals have completed an entire master's degree program using NCPACE. As with this small group of Sailors, Lt. Degenkolb's achievement is noteworthy in that she was able to complete all of her coursework at a master's level while in a sea-duty status."
Degenkolb's sea-duty assignment was as a Naval Flight Officer with Carrier Airborne Early Warning Squadron (VAW) 112, an E-2 squadron based at Naval Air Station Point Mugu, Calif. She completed the degree requirements just before transferring to her current assignment at Commander, Logistics Group, Western Pacific in Singapore as a flag aide. During her master's work, she was deployed on USS John C. Stennis (CVN 74) in 2009. Degenkolb learned about NCPACE and the Oklahoma program through Bryan Burdick, the Navy College Office program manager for Naval Base Ventura County in California. It took her approximately two and a half years to complete all the requirements. "Mr. Burdick was a phenomenal and extremely supportive resource throughout the NCPACE process," she said. "Not only did he help me find a suitable program, but acted as a liaison between OU and me."

Because the NCPACE program she chose was self-paced, Degenkolb said the hardest thing about it was staying on track. "Procrastination - whether intentional or inadvertent - is an easy trap to fall into," she said. "Life always presents a ton of distractions, both at work and at home, that eat away at your 'planned' study time."
Even with this challenge, Degenkolb would recommend the program to others. "NCPACE is a wonderful program that allows active duty service members the opportunity to earn their degrees at an affordable price. OU provides an interesting leadership syllabus, which is relevant to a leader's daily interactions and challenges," she said.
Pursuing a master's degree while on sea duty was the right choice at the right time in Degenkolb's career. "I chose the NCPACE program because the opportunity to earn a master's at the cost of books is unheard of. I was interested in earning my master's degree, but wanted to keep alternative shore duty options open," she said. "I was surprised at how few people seemed to take advantage of NCPACE. It's a phenomenal opportunity."

Degenkolb pointed out that the degree she earned is directly applicable to her Navy career. "Earning a master's degree is an important milestone in anyone's professional career. I feel that my degree, which focused on leadership, gave me interesting insight through case studies to problems and dilemmas that other leaders have faced," she said.
CPPD Commanding Officer Capt. John Newcomer said it is important to provide Sailors with opportunities to grow through the Navy's VOLED program, which is a conduit for equipping Sailors with strong analytical skills, the ability to make informed decisions, and avenues to pursue life-long educational and credentialing goals.
"With higher education costs rising every year and becoming more difficult to finance, it's understandable many people in the Navy want to maximize education opportunities. Lt. Degenkolb has set a high standard to complete a master's while on sea duty. I encourage all Sailors in eligible sea-duty billets to consider taking advantage of NCPACE."

Opportunities for continuing education support the personal and professional growth of Sailors making them invaluable assets to the Navy. They are important parts of the readiness area of the 21st Century Sailor and Marine initiative which consolidates a set of objectives and policies, new and existing, to maximize Sailor and Marine personal readiness, build resiliency and hone the most combat-effective force in the history of the Department of the Navy.

New Job Push to Benefit Military Spouses

First Lady Michelle Obama unveiled a new hiring effort that will deliver thousands of portable, flexible job opportunities to military spouses.
Eleven companies have pledged more than 15,000 jobs for military spouses and veterans, the first lady said. The good news for spouses is the vast majority of these jobs - in areas such as customer support and telemarketing - can be accomplished from home.
Other jobs will be in contact centers located near military installations, and offer family-friendly scheduling, growth opportunities and the ability to transfer seamlessly from one center to another.
This commitment will make a "huge difference" for military spouses, Obama said during a teleconference announcing this effort. "Having an opportunity to have a decent job ... is one of the most important ways we can support these families," she said.
I think my fellow working parents would agree on the value of a flexible, portable job, especially as we attempt to balance home and work life. And it's particularly important for military spouses, who must balance the everyday challenges of life with military-related demands.
My friend, a Navy wife, is about to move. Fortunately, she works from home and can live anywhere. Not having to worry about finding a new job on top of the other stressors of a move is a huge relief, she said. Her flexible work hours also offer a better work-life balance, especially since she has two children.
Obama cited her own struggles with that work-life balance. As a working mother, she said, she fought for the type of flexibility these jobs offer throughout her career.
The first lady thanked these companies for backing up their words with "meaningful, concrete action."
Companies' key commitments include:
- Alpine Access has pledged to recruit, train, and hire more than 3,000 military-connected Americans over the next two years. The company also will launch TalentSprout, an online portal with skill-building and job training curriculum. These career and personal development courses will be offered free-of-charge to qualified members of the armed forces and to their eligible spouses and caregivers.

- Arise Virtual Solutions Inc. plans to add 10,000 new independent business and client services professionals from military families over the next several years. Arise also intends to develop special programs to create awareness among military spouses and veterans.
- DialAmerica aims to increase the number of military-affiliated employees to make up 20 percent of its workforce by 2014.
- Etech Global Services has committed to hiring a minimum of 200 military spouses and veterans in next two years.
- Hilton Hotels employs nearly 800 military-related employees at their hotels and offices around the globe. In partnership with Recruit Military and other community-based organizations, Hilton Worldwide is pledging another 3.5 percent of their Hilton@Home call center positions to military spouses through 2014.
- Prosperity America intends to hire 50 more veterans and military spouses.
- Quality Contact Solutions is creating 150 work-at-home business-to-business marketing and communication jobs for military spouses over the next two years. These jobs will be in the health care and telecommunications industries.
- Agility Marketing is planning to add 100 jobs for military spouses and veterans over the next two years.
- QCSS Inc. will ensure a minimum of 10 percent of the forecasted 200 new hires from now through 2014 will be veterans and their families.

- SP Data intends to add more than 150 jobs for military spouses and veterans over the next two years.
- Veteran Call Center, LLC plans to create an additional 1,000 jobs for military spouses and veterans over the next two years.
These companies and their job opportunities also will be integrated into the Defense Department's Military Spouse Employment Partnership. MSEP is a partnership with more than 100 private-sector companies that have committed to a focused effort on military spouse employment.
The first lady's announcement comes in advance of next week's Joining Forces anniversary. Obama and Dr. Jill Biden, the vice president's wife, launched this national initiative last year to rally the nation in support of troops, veterans and their families.
Since then, they've focused much of their efforts on employment issues for spouses and veterans, the first lady said, and have "made strides all along the way."
